There's a New Game in Town

By Councilmember Mike Peterson

Residents of Cottonwood Heights have always prided themselves in being healthy and active. Our community offers wonderful opportunities from running to swimming and everything in between. But now, there's a new game in town. It's sweeping the country and has drawn thousands of people, young and old, off the couch and has given them the opportunity to become more active in a social, family, or competitive environment. It has jump-started the lives of thousands of the non-active, and extended the active lifestyles of thousands more who want to stay active. There are now over 2,000 locations to play across the country with thousands of nothing to do. Their residence had some open space previously used for badminton, an old badminton net, and a few ping pong paddles. They found an old perforated ball that seemed to bounce well on asphalt, lowered the badminton net to a reasonable height, and began hitting the ball back and forth. Over the next few weeks and after introducing their discovery to a few friends, new players experiencing the game for the first time every year. It's one of the fastest growing sports across the country and rapidly growing in popularity right here in Utah and specifically in Cottonwood Heights. What is this new obsession? You guessed it: PICKLEBALL! The game is played on what looks like a small tennis court outdoors, or in nearly every recreation center gymnasium in the Salt Lake Valley.

they created rules of play. Through it all, they focused on creating an activity that the whole family could enjoy.

Today from Logan to St. George you can find thousands of Utah residents playing the game every day. Many cities in our state have now built, or plan to build, formal courts in their neighborhood or community parks. Others have simply used existing tennis courts for play by adding new game lines to the existing tennis court, allowing play for both sports. Recreation centers throughout the state are adding new game lines to their gymnasiums, using portable nets, and allowing indoor play year-round and especially

Butlerville Days Parade Accepting Applications

A major highlight of Butlerville Days is the annual parade. Floats, bands, horse-drawn carriages, businesses, and local leaders all join together to create one of the valley's best community parades. Last year, over 70 entries lined up to take the yearly trip down the crowded mile-long route. Since this year's parade is on Saturday July 23 (a few days before the downtown SLC Days of '47 parade), we are anticipating an even larger turnout.

We hope that your group will consider joining us in this year's parade. Applications are now available from the city website at http:// ch.utah.gov/community/events/butlerville_days/. This is a PDF form that can be filled out on your computer and emailed back to the city. Please be sure to ensure your application is complete before submitting it. If you have any questions, please contact Ann Eatchel at aeatchel@ch.utah.gov, Butlervilledays@ch.utah.gov or 801-550-8225.

Additionally, we are looking for an Eagle Scout wishing to complete a community project. If you are interested, please contact Ann using the above information. ■

during the cold winter months. Some residents have purchased portable nets and simply set up their own court for a family gathering in their driveway or school playground by putting down game lines with chalk. Butlerville Days

"[Three new public outdoor pickleball courts] are now available for public use, or, can be reserved for personal use..."

will be hosting our community's first pickleball tournament this coming July. It will be called the Mayor's Cup and will be a mixed doubles event only.

Cottonwood Heights, Salt Lake County, the city of Cottonwood Heights, and Cottonwood Heights Recreation all collaborated to build three new public outdoor pickleball courts directly behind the recreation center. These courts are now available for public use, or can be reserved for personal use through the center. The recreation center also has three indoor courts set up in the gymnasium and are available for indoor play Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. All skill levels are welcome, and there's even talk about developing instructional classes for those who are a bit hesitant to jump right in. Playing for just the last few months, I've been able to stay active, meet new friends, and have a low impact activity I can enjoy when traveling to new destinations. Our community already offers so many opportunities to stay healthy and active. Whether you prefer the slopes, the road, or the gym, make no mistake about it: there's a new game in town and it's sure to please. ■

Get Ready For The Cottonwood Heights Shakeout

Cottonwood Heights will conduct its "ShakeOut" (earthquake drill) exercise on Saturday April 16th. In addition to surveying our neighborhoods and their ability to report the status of injuries via triage ribbons we will set up a reception center and a full shelter at the Cottonwood Heights Recreation Center.

All residents are asked to display ribbons on their front door or handrail by 9 am so block captains can record participation. If you need new ribbons you can contact your block captains. Please keep the ribbons after the exercise. They should be stored in an easily accessible location with other emergency supplies.

Stop by the rec center between 9:30 and noon that day and look at the capabilities the city has when it partners with the Red Cross to set up a shelter. Additional information related to family and business preparedness will be available at the rec center on the 16th.

If you would like to volunteer on the 16th or need ribbons for your residence please contact Mike Halligan at 801-541-3482. ■

CH Study a Part of State Capitol Event

Cottonwood Heights' study of Fort Union Boulevard was one of the maps featured during the "Maps on the Hill" event at the Utah State Capitol rotunda on March 1.

The study was also featured on pages 10 and 11 inside the event's accompanying booklet.

The map was compiled and prepared using the Cottonwood Heights Geographic Information Systems (GIS) by Sarah Rivera, a GIS intern working with the city's Community and Economic Development team, under the supervision of GIS Specialist Kevin Sato.

The study was also presented to the city council in February, and featured suggestions made by three teams of resident volunteers that participated in focus groups conducted by the city's Community and Economic Development department. ■

9-1-1 Offers Texting Option If You Can't Talk

By CHPD Chief Robby Russo

The Cottonwood Heights Police Department is dispatched out of Valley Emergency Communications

Center (VECC). This is where the non-emergency and 9-1-1 calls for service are routed. Text-to-911 service makes it possible for those in need of emergency assistance to send a text message to 9-1-1. This service will be especially helpful in cases when a caller cannot communicate verbally due to hearing or speech impairment, or in cases when a crime is in process, the caller is facing domestic abuse, the caller is injured and cannot speak, or in other scenarios where a voice call to 9-1-1 is not possible.

How it Works: In the number field enter 911 and in the body of text, state the emergency and location before pressing send. Texting is now ubiquitous and in the fabric of how we communicate. We're not advocating text-to-911 as a replacement but in addition to calling 911.

The technology will soon enable the caller to also send pictures directly to the 9-1-1 center. Sprint currently supports MMS (multi-media) on their network, while AT&T, Verizon and T-Mobile are still attempting to bring that enhancement into their networks.

For some reason, if I call my kids they don't answer but will respond immediately if I text. My only concern with this program is younger callers might be inclined to text when they can call. Text messages to 9-1-1 are treated like any other text message on the network, meaning delays are possible. Calling 9-1-1 provides more thorough and efficient communication.

In real world dynamic situations, it's important to communicate information as rapidly as possible without losing anything in translation. Therein is the risk with texting, especially when two-way communication can occur more efficiently in a voice call. The dispatchers, once identifying the nature of the complaint have a series of protocol questions to push to the responding officers.

When texting, it's important to not use acronyms and/or texting lingo so that the message is clearly understood.

In situations where a caller is in jeopardy, the text is very valuable, but should never be used as a shortcut.

Contact 9-1-1 to:

- Save a life
- Stop a crime
- Report a fire

Note: Prank texting carries the same consequences as prank calling 9-1-1. ■

Meet the CHPD Officers... Who They Are and Why They Serve

By Martha Cardon

Detective Michael Galieti

Detective Michael Galieti always has his fingers on the pulse of what's going on in our community. Serving as the School Resource Officer at Butler Middle School for six years and active at five elementary schools, Detective Galieti works closely with school administrations and deals with a variety of issues involving students. He teaches two programs: DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) and 'Keeping It REAL' (Refuse, Explain, Avoid, and Leave) to help students make wise choices about drugs and alcohol. In other words, he teaches them, "Don't go there!"

Previously with the West Jordan Police Department, Detective Galieti was one of the original officers who helped start the CHPD in 2008. Detective Galieti is passionate about what he does: First, as a police officer who works with and loves kids and second as a teacher who helps change lives. He wants kids to know him personally and to develop positive relationships.

Mike Galieti has been married for more than 20 years to a marriage counselor (seems fitting, doesn't it?), and one of his grandchildren attends Butler Middle School. While attending the police academy, Mike earned his Masters Degree in Management and is currently working on a doctorate in Organizational Leadership. He will finish his coursework this year and then tackle the dissertation. He had a business background before his law enforcement career and hopes to teach college classes in the future.

Neighborhood Watch is one of Detective Galieti's specialties. He says, "It leverages the community's investment in law enforcement," and that, "Where law enforcement has more community support, it becomes more effective." Galieti appreciates and values Cottonwood Heights' community support!

Thank you, Detective Galieti, for your service to our community! ■

Answer

Bishop Frank E. Cowley of the Butler Ward, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day-Saints, presented a sum of money which he said was "...a very large amount for such a small community," to C. Ivor Boyce, whose house had been partially destroyed in a fire the previous Sunday. Volunteers who had canvassed the area on two different days had collected the money. The money was donated to the Boyce family to use as needed in rebuilding and replacing furniture that was lost in the blaze. People in the area also provided labor to Mr. Boyce in the rebuilding of his home. ■

Bengals Take Bite out of Big Apple

The bright lights of Broadway are dim compared to the collective shine of the Model United Nations Team at Brighton High. The students on the school's state-champion Model UN team walked away from the national contest in New York with several awards. Led by top delegate Sean Robinson, the team won second place in the International Court of Justice. Sophomores Claire Esplin and Sarah Ellis took top honors and were selected to address the United Nations General Assembly. Twenty-one students made the trip to New York to compete on Brighton's team. They vied for awards against more than 3,500 students from 30 countries. ■

Brighton Swimmers Capture State Titles

Coach Todd Etherington

These cats can swim. The Brighton High Bengals won state titles at the recent 5A Utah Swimming Championships of the Utah High School Activities Association. Senior Brock Harries repeated as the state champion in the 100-yard freestyle and played a large role in helping the Bengals' boys team win the 200-yard medley relay and the 200-yard freestyle relay. Freshman Rachel Butler took home the trophies in the 200-yard individual medley and the 500-yard freestyle. Overall, Brighton's girls finished the meet in the No. 2 spot, the boys captured the No. 5 spot, and Coach Todd Etherington was announced as the Coach of the Year. ■

'Oh, the Places You'll Go' On Dr. Seuss Day

Of all the memorable Dr. Seuss rhymes, here's betting this line from "Oh the Places You'll Go" is a fan favorite of the University of Utah women's soccer team: "There are points to be scored. There are games to be won. And the magical things you can do with that ball will make you the winning-est winner of all." In honor of Theodor "Dr. Seuss" Geisel's birthday, the Lady Utes spent the morning of Wednesday, March 2 reading with students of Canyon View and Bella Vista elementary schools. The event was staged as part of National Education Association's Read Across America Day, held each year on Dr. Seuss' birthday. Green eggs and ham also was served for lunch. Reading is the key to acquiring knowledge — and having sports figures model the behavior for kids culturally reinforces what's taught in the classroom, said Bella Vista Principal Cory Anderson. ■

Bengals Talk 'Face to Faith' with French Diplomats

On March 3, Brighton High School hosted a delegation from France who were in Utah as part of the U.S. State Department's International Visitor Leadership Program. The visit was arranged as a result of Canyons District's involvement in the Face to Faith initiative of the Tony Blair Faith Foundation. The aim of the activity: engage students and the foreign diplomats in a frank dialogue about how faith and religion pay roles in shaping culture and society in France and the United States. The visitors told students that, unlike students in America, public-school students in France are prohibited from wearing any garb or jewelry that would signify faith or religion while on campus. The French guests also explained through an interpreter that anti-Muslim and anti-Semitic sentiment runs rampant in some parts of France. The students in teacher Jodi Ide's class also answered questions from the French visitors about The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Students also asked the guests what they liked the most about Utah. The answer? The mountains. ■

Whitmore Library Happenings in April

Senior Art Exhibit

The Whitmore Library is looking for art submissions from artists, age 55 or older for our Senior Art Exhibit in May. Each artist may have 1 piece of art in the exhibit, so choose a favorite piece to show.

All mediums are accepted, but art must be matted and/or framed and ready for hanging in a gallery-type setting (no 3D art). All art must be original. Entry forms may be found at the Whitmore Library. Submissions will be accepted between April 11 and April 23, 2016 at the Whitmore Library's Information Desk. An Artist Reception will be held on Saturday, May 7, 2016 at 3:00pm and the exhibit will be open at the library during library hours through the month of May. If you have questions, contact Dan Berube at 801-943-4636 or email dberube@slcolibrary.org.

Celebrate National Library Month

April is National Library Month and Whitmore Library is celebrating! We are asking people to finish the thought, "I'm a Library Fan Because. . .". We are encouraging people to use social media to share their reasons and their library stories through words or pictures using the hashtags: #slcolibraryfan and #whitmorelibraryfan. There are lots of reasons to be a library fan. So tell us – why are you a library fan? ■

Do You Need a Business License?

Starting a business can be exciting and sometimes intimidating. There's a lot to consider, and it's easy to forget the necessary licenses and registrations that make your business legal. If you're operating a business in Cottonwood Heights, whether it's home-based or in a commercial space, a business license from the city is a part of "doing business."

Not being compliant with business licensing requirements could leave you legally vulnerable and could lead to fines and penalties, potentially harming your business. Taking the time from the start will help make sure your business is licensed and ready to go. It's a process that can make life a little easier by contacting your local business licensing official.

The first step for a business owner is to contact the State of Utah at www.corporations.utah.gov to register a business and secure a business name. If you're selling taxable goods or services, you also need to obtain a Utah Sales Tax number, and a federal Tax ID number is necessary if you have employees.

Many businesses, such as massage therapists, social workers, and nail technicians, need certification from the Utah Division of Occupational and Professional Licensing. Visit www.dopl.utah.gov for an entire list of rules regarding occupational licensing.

Once all requirements are met through the state, business owners in Cottonwood Heights can contact Peri Kinder at pkinder@ch.utah.gov or 801-944-7067 to get the information needed to license a business with the city. Usually, a license is approved within seven days of application.

"We try to make it as easy as possible," Kinder says. "We want business owners to know who we are and contact us if they need help. Whether you have a small home-based business or a large corporation, we're here to answer all your questions."

Cottonwood Heights prides itself on its vibrant business community, and we appreciate the trust business owners have demonstrated in us by locating their businesses in the city. For more information about business licensing, visit www.cottonwoodheights.utah.gov.

Note: Attend the Cottonwood Heights Lunch & Learn: Business Licensing 101 Friday, April 8, 12-1 p.m.

Cottonwood Heights City Hall—First Floor Training Room. Free to anyone interested. Bring your lunch and a desire to learn! ■

Take The Mayor's Water Pledge!

The city of Cottonwood Heights challenges all residents to take part in the nationwide "My Water Pledge." It's a friendly competition between cities across the US to see who can be the most "water-wise." Mayor Cullimore challenges residents to conserve water, energy and other natural resources on behalf of the city through a series of informative, easy-to-use online pledges. You can take the challenge at <http://w3.mywaterpledge.com/>. The challenge will take place between April 1-30.

Cities with the highest percentage of residents who take the challenge in their population category win. Participants in the winning cities are eligible to win hundreds of prizes.

Cottonwood Heights is situated between two canyons that supply water for the Salt Lake Valley. We know very well that water is one of our most precious resources, and needs to be preserved and maintained responsibly if we are to flourish. We challenge our citizens to take action to conserve and protect our treasured water supply. ■
